Unmasking Racial Micro-Aggressions

Faculty/Staff Teach-in

How do racial micro-aggressions* affect our work with students and colleagues? Christopher Benson, associate dean of the College of Media at the University of Illinois, will explain how we may be creating a negative campus climate without realizing it. Being more aware of how our everyday words and actions affect others will lead to a safer, more inclusive campus climate.

Department offices may close so all staff members have the opportunity to attend. We ask that you keep your office open if you do not attend the meeting since classes will be in session.

For more information or if you have any questions, contact Roshaunda Ross at mcaffairs@iwu.edu or ext. 3412.

*Racial micro-aggressions are "brief and commonplace daily verbal, behavioral, or environmental indignities, whether intentional or unintentional, that communicate hostile, derogatory, or negative racial slights and insults to the target group or person." (Sue, 2007)
