Crafting Your Signatures

Many of us see our signatures as simply recorded expressions of our name. In the Illinois Wesleyan Educational Studies Department, we see your signature as your proclamation of who you are to the rest of the world. During your time at IWU, we will work with you to create three signatures. Your first signature is your social justice signature. It is formalized when you complete a social justice project, engaging with people who come from diverse backgrounds and have experiences different from your own. Your second signature is your teaching signature, which occurs when you teach other people’s children in the classroom and show that you have made a difference in their learning, their development, and their lives. Your final signature represents your effort to make a difference in the teaching profession as a scholar, by actively researching an educational problem and presenting your findings at our annual Inquiries into Teaching and Learning Conference. These three signatures testify to your growth as a caring, dedicated teacher/scholar for social justice. They don’t completely define who you are, but signify what you might want to become. It will be our pleasure to work with you on this journey.

Teacher Education

To become a great teacher you need to learn how to help all children learn. This means that you need to understand the challenges children confront inside and outside of the classroom as well as the nature of the ideas with which they need to engage. In short, you need to become an expert in the curriculum relevant to your teaching, and you need to understand the needs of the children with whom you interact. At the same time you need to appreciate the gifts that your students bring to the classroom, and thus also appreciate and affirm their diverse backgrounds, be they related to ethnicity, socio-economic class, culture, language, gender, ability or sexual orientation. We are excited to work with you as you begin one of the world’s most interesting and important professions.

The Interdisciplinary Major or Minor in Educational Studies

The interdisciplinary Educational Studies major or minor prepares students to work with children and families in government, private industry, adult education, museums, recreation, after-school care and social work or social policy. The Educational Studies curriculum also prepares students for graduate and professional school in education, social policy, school counseling or law.

Why Educational Studies at Illinois Wesleyan?

- All students are placed in local schools concurrent with their first course Education and Social Justice. It is a unique advantage to gain hands-on experience in actual classrooms during your first year in college.
- Senior year (fall semester) student teaching takes place in an area school or through the Chicago Center Urban Teaching Program.
- Most student teachers have a year-long mentoring relationship with their cooperating teachers.
- Student teachers receive ongoing mentoring and support from their University supervisors during student teaching.

Teacher Licensure Programs

- Elementary (1-6)
- Secondary (9-12)
  - English Language Arts
  - Mathematics
  - Science: Biology, Chemistry, Physics
  - Social Science: History
  - French and Spanish (K-12)

The above programs are accredited by the Illinois State Board of Education.

Interdisciplinary Concentrations in Educational Studies

- Child and Family Studies
- Education and Public Policy
- Education and International Studies

Reading Teacher Coursework

- Foundations of Literacy: Reading, Writing, and Oral Communication
- Child and Adolescent Literature
- Advanced Assessment and Diagnosis of Reading
- Advanced Interventions for Struggling Readers
- Internship in Reading
All students conduct a year-long inquiry project senior year and participate in the John Wesley Powell Research Conference. The campus Student Education Association is very active, and is affiliated with the National Education Association (NEA).

Learning from a Quality Faculty

Educational Studies faculty have extensive experience working with children and adolescents in public schools and other settings, as well as within university teacher education programs. Our collective experience enables us to bring together the theoretical and the practical in meaningful ways for our students.

- Irving Epstein, Ben and Susan Rhodes Professor of Peace and Social Justice, Chair of Educational Studies, Director of the Center for Human Rights and Social Justice
  Ph.D. — University of California, Los Angeles
  Specializations include educational policy, secondary history education, comparative and international education, children’s rights and international human rights.

- Leah Nillas, Associate Professor of Educational Studies and Coordinator of Secondary Education
  Ph.D. — Illinois State University
  Specializations include K-12 mathematics education, educational technology and teacher inquiry.

- Pennie Gray, Assistant Professor of Educational Studies and Coordinator of Elementary Education
  Ph.D. — Illinois State University
  Specializations include elementary and middle school, literacy and reading, and composition.

- Margaret Evans, Assistant Professor of Educational Studies
  PhD. — University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign
  Specializations include child study, assessment, evaluation, and teacher education policy.

- Jen Crider, Director of Field Placement
  M.S. — Bradley University
  Specializations include elementary and fine arts education.

Putting Learning into Practice

Fieldwork over four years of professional and liberal arts education integrates theory and practice. IWU graduates teach all over the state of Illinois, including urban, rural and suburban areas. Others venture across the U.S. to states such as Georgia, Hawaii, California, Alaska, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. Graduates have also found employment in Japan, Mexico and European countries. Many go on to graduate school in areas such as special education or counseling. Interdisciplinary majors pursue various careers working with children and families.

“We work closely with every student in Educational Studies. The faculty offer an intellectually rigorous and challenging curriculum. At the same time we provide individual mentoring, support and guidance so that all students may achieve academic and professional success. Educational Studies students create communities of peer support as they undertake the educational journey at Illinois Wesleyan.”

Professor Irving Epstein
Educational Studies Department Chair

For Further Information,
Write or Call:

Dr. Irving Epstein
Ben and Susan Rhodes Professor of Peace and Social Justice, Chair,
Educational Studies Department, Director of the Center for Human Rights and Social Justice
Illinois Wesleyan University
P.O. Box 2900
Bloomington, IL 61702-2900
309/556-3105
iepstein@iwu.edu
iwu.edu/edstudies