

Greek and Roman Studies

The Greeks and Romans carried their ideas from Britain to Sudan and from Portugal to Iran, fusing indigenous traditions with their own, thereby creating a remarkably diverse, and yet culturally distinct, world. The western imagination is rooted in this foundation, historically providing inspiration in all aspects of life, including language, literature, law, art, architecture, politics, philosophy, music and theater, as well as notions of nationality, gender and race.

Why Greek and Roman Studies at Illinois Wesleyan?

- Greek and Roman Studies is an interdisciplinary program designed to provide students with linguistic skills through the study of the Greek and Latin languages, as well as an in-depth knowledge of the history and culture of Greece and Rome.
- Students will be prepared to further their interests in language, literature and history at the postgraduate level, whether in this field or others, including medicine, education, law, public service, journalism, publishing, library science, theology and more.
- Students are strongly encouraged to study abroad and pursue archaeological field work opportunities.
- Greek and Latin at IWU are designed both for the student who desires to read ancient literature and for students planning to go into specialized fields that make use of technical terms based on Greek and Latin, such as law and medicine.

Putting Learning into Practice

- Study abroad options include programs in Greece, Turkey, Sicily, Egypt and Rome.
- Knowledge of Greek and Latin can be applied to technical terminology for law, science, medicine and philosophy; 90 percent of this terminology is based on Classical Greek and Latin.
- Recent Greek and Roman Studies graduates have enrolled in the following graduate programs:
 - Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) — Archaeological Materials Science
 - Indiana University — Ancient History
 - George Washington University — Museum Studies
 - DePaul University — Law School
 - University of Illinois — Latin
 - Emory University — Program in Museum Studies
 - University of Chicago — Anthropology and Museum Studies

Our understanding of education, politics, law, science and even religion has been profoundly influenced by the Greeks and Romans. Even our English language is built largely on Greek and Latin roots. Sixty percent of all English words, and ninety percent of technical terms, come to us from Greek and Latin. For this reason, these ancient languages are far from 'dead.' Students in every discipline will benefit from the study of the cultures, ideas and values of ancient Greece and Rome.”
