Description: Joel Barlow's Columbiad (1807) was composed to be America's national epic, modeled after the epic poetry and mythology of Greece and Rome. This talk analyses Barlow's often polemical engagement with his classical models, with a focus on his manipulation of the myth of Jason, Medea and the Argonauts to reframe his version of American history.