

Hallie's Bio:

Hi, my name is Hallie (she/her), and I am an incoming senior whose major is English Writing with interests in creative writing, poetry, analytical essays, and history. My personal way of writing depends on what I am trying to accomplish. With analytical essays, I like to create an outline and take each paragraph one step at a time. My creative writing process is completely the opposite- I typically wait until inspiration hits (which isn't always beneficial) and then punch out whatever ideas flow. I love working with creative writing and poetry because I love to see the way people can expand their minds in new ways.

You can expect me, as your tutor, to help you find your way in the writing process and see which tips and tricks work best for you. I will help you through any stage of your writing, from the outline to brainstorming, or editing your final work. As a queen of procrastination, I know that sometimes you need a good Netflix break (or a good cry) and a coffee to help push you through to buckle down and write, and I am here to help aid any procrastination worries or any writing anxiety. My goal is to help students reevaluate their idea of writing and teach them that it isn't something that you should hate, but rather something that you should embrace. I look forward to working with you!
