

Kailee Galloway's Bio:

Hello!! You've stumbled across my writing center tutor bio which hopefully means we'll be working together! My name is Kailee Galloway (she/her/hers). I'm a junior Secondary Education and English Literature double major.

I love working at the writing center because I enjoy aiding my peers in their education and love hearing their ideas. (Wow what a shock! An education major loves helping people work on their schoolwork?!) But, in all seriousness, I truly enjoy learning about my peers, their courses, and what they are writing about because I get to learn from working with all of you as well!

As a tutor, my main goal is to increase writers' confidence and comfortability with their own writing style. I want writers to find their voice and feel as though their ideas are being expressed through their writing assignments. Therefore, I'll be trying to get to know you and your interests during a session. I want to hear all about your perspective and ideas on your writing and so I'll be asking lots of questions! It's my tutoring philosophy that the writer and the tutor are engaged in a relationship that is beneficial to both. Both of us can learn from each other within these sessions and, if we don't know something, we can find it out together. I won't tell you how to write something but lead you to find it on your own so that your voice is heard! I want the writer's voice to come through and not to overlay it with my own.

Some of my favorite assignments to work on are pieces that have to do with analysis. Whether it be analyzing a book, poem, article, etc. I love when a writer can add their own unique twist to their paper. If you think your essay has a lot to it, it probably means you have a lot to say which I love! Tell me all about what you are passionate about!

I also have an interest in the Spanish language and have taken several courses throughout my time here with IWU professors such as Dixon-Montgomery and Ferradans.

To cover a few of the basics, I'm familiar with MLA and APA styles of citation and can also speak/read/write at an intermediate level of Spanish. Professors I have written for include: Theune, Diaz, O'Gorman, Chapman, Jaher, Evans, Epstein, Gray, Nadeau, Dixon-Montgomery, Scanlon, Ferradans, and Nielson.
